The Golden Hair.
BY ANNA L. RICE.
Last night I dreamt of my old
A little golden hair
And I saw the sunny gleam
That once it had
And I saw the sunny gleam
That once it had
And I saw the sunny gleam
That once it had

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.
Useful Recipes.
RICE FATTENERS.—Boil a beautiful of rice until it is tender, and add one quart of milk and let it boil ten minutes; cool it, and add flour enough to make a stiff paste, and then add a little oil and a little salt, and mix it well.

CREAMING WINDOW GLASS.—Strong soap will destroy green paint more readily than other colors, having the same effect that it has with grease.
Many rooms are soiled by the ignorance or carelessness of women, in the application of strong soap water. Much better use whitening on the glass, and wash the soap off with cleaning, by which the lustre will be preserved.

A RELISH FOR BREAKFAST ON LUNCHEON.
Take a quarter of a pound of cheese, grated and fresh; cut it up in thin slices and put it in a bowl; add a large cupful of sweet milk; add a quarter of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, a dash of pepper, a little salt, and a piece of butter as large as a walnut; mix the mixture all the time. Have at hand three or four crackers, finely powdered or rolled, and sprinkle them in gradually as they are stirred in, turn out the contents into a warm dish and serve.
It is very delicious.

How to Grow Hogs.
A practical breeder gives the following advice, which, in the main, we think sound, for those who have not too large, and who are engaged in mixed husbandry.
To handle hogs to the best advantage a pasture is needed of mixed grasses, clover, blue grass and timothy, and it is best if there is no running water or stock ponds in the lot. Hogs do better where there are no branches or stock ponds to wallow in. In place thereof, have good water pumped for them. Have troughs made, and nail strips across the troughs, both apart, to keep the hogs from lying down in the water, and let these hogs be put on floors, to keep them from digging up wallowing hogs. If feet be given, or the hogs be soaked in swill barrels for twelve hours before feeding—no longer—and fed to them as drink.—Germania Telegraph.

Error in the Treatment of Horses.
A popular error, which bears hard on the horse, is the custom of making the sides of conveyances of all sorts of detriments to the public health, both in the town and country. It is not, perhaps, saying too much to assert, that the uniform adherence to it has cost our highways hundreds of thousands of dollars. Had there been a latitude or play of from ten to twelve or fourteen inches in the tread of the wheels, especially in the front wheels, it would have been impossible to have cut our pavements into the ruts we now see, and which renders hauling so difficult along our streets and roads.
Like the Connecticut wagons of the last generation, with their broad tires,
a difference in the width of our axles would have improved rather than damaged our highways, and we should not need cut into alternating ridges and ruts, so many of them are now.

Cleaning Rusty Plows.
The following is said to be an effectious method of cleaning a rusty plow.
Take a quart of water and pour slowly into it half a pint of sulphuric acid.
(The mixture will become quite warm from chemical action, and is the reason why the acid should be poured slowly into the water rather than the water into the acid.) Wash the mould board (or any other iron that is rusty) with this weak acid, and let it remain on the iron until it evaporates. Then wash it again. The object is to give time for the acid to dissolve the rust.
Then wash with water, and you see where the worst rusty spots are. Apply some more acid and rub those spots with brick. The acid and the scouring will remove most of the rust. Then wash the mould-board thoroughly with water to remove all the acid and rub it over with petroleum as soon as we put our oil, and let it be until spring.
When you go plowing take a bottle of acid to the field and apply it every now and then to any spots of rust that may remain. The acid and the scouring of the iron will soon make it perfectly bright and smooth. If all iron work be washed over with petroleum as soon as we put our tools, implements and machines aside for winter, it will keep them from rusting, and save a great deal of trouble and annoyance, and say nothing of depreciation and loss.

Wit and Wisdom.
Wash the fruit and soak it over night. Next morning stew it until done, and sweeten to suit the taste, that is, until sweet enough. To make plain pastry, allow half a pound of shortening to a pound of flour, and for rich pastry, allow three-quarters of a pound of flour. Lard makes the most delicate-looking crust, but if some butter is used the crust will be more tender.
Rub the flour and shortening well together, so the shortening will absorb no more flour; then add water sufficient to enable you to roll out. If rolled a few times it will be all the more flaky. Roll from you, and add a little shortening at each rolling. It should be made as quickly as possible, not left to stand.
If it is ready for the oven. In cold weather, the water used may be a very little warm, but not enough to melt "anything." Some pastry-makers make a tender crust of sour milk and soda and a little shortening—sweet cream and soda is much in favor with others.
The crust should be rolled until thin.
A thick crust to a fruit pie is undesirable. The top crust should be cut large enough to cover the under one.
Put in the fruit, cold, and plenty of sugar. Prick the top crust, about the center, and then the edges well together to keep in the juice. To "hem," the top crust must be folded over the edge of the bottom crust, lying between them and the pie dish. Then press the edge around with your thumb, and the pie is effectively "sealed." Place it in a moderately hot oven and bake quickly.
If you want "soggy" pastry, violate these rules and you will have it. If you want a pie to set before a king, a man, follow these directions. We cannot recommend pies as a wholesome article of diet, which is the only protest to the foregoing.
An oven too hot will bake the pastry before it has risen any. Practice corrects all such mistakes: the oven should be quite air-tight.

Curious and Scientific.
AMONG the astronomers who went from England to Sicily to observe the late eclipse, were two women, apparent to take observations with the spectroscope.
NEW JERSEY nail mills are manufacturing a new patent nail, for which they have secured a State right. It has a serrated edge, and its superiority is said to be manifest in work where any jarring motion may have a tendency to shake the nail loose.
This serrated edge, which is known to be the best of New Zealand flax.
It has sword-like leaves, ten or twelve feet in length, and is used by the natives for binding their sheaves, fastening their canoes, tying up their horses, and in almost every possible way.
Is ordinary fish, the housewife makes about 100 strokes with its wing in a second, and is carried through the air about five feet; but when alarmed, the velocity can be increased six or seven fold, so as to carry the insect thirty-five feet in that brief time.

A curious experiment was tried in Russia with some murderers. They were placed, without knowing it, in four beds where four persons had died of cholera. They did not take the disease. They were then told that they were to sleep in beds where some persons had died of malignant cholera, and the beds were, in fact, new and had not been used at all. Nevertheless three of them died of the disease within four hours.
The English Mechanic says that when a living oyster is opened, the liquor in the lower shell, if viewed through a microscope, will be found to contain multitudes of small oysters, covered with shells, and swimming nimbly about. One hundred and twenty of these little oysters extend but a single inch. The liquor also contains a variety of animalcules and myriads of worms of three distinct species.

PROBABLY the most curious ant in the world is the parasol ant of the West Indies. Dr. Forbes Winslow, who "look on 'Light,'" says these ants walk in long procession, each one carrying a cut-out leaf of its head as parasol, in the sun, and they deposit these in holes near or two feet deep under ground, apparently with no other object than to form a comfortable nest for a species of white snake, which is found in them.
The use of perchloride of iron is recommended for rheumatism by Dr.
Reynolds, in the British Medical Journal. It is claimed for this remedy that it relieves the joints in from one to three days, and shortens the duration of the fever; and the sooner the iron is given the shorter will be the duration.
The dose is from twenty to forty drops
every six hours.

Exposure, with cast-iron beams in architecture has convinced the best judges that it can never be known whether or not it is taken, whether the girders when made will be as strong as expected. They are never to be dependent on; and the accident at King's College, where the whole dining-room was destroyed by the giving way of an imperfect cast-iron beam, should prevent their use henceforth in any case where weight or iron can be substituted.
"THE WIND IS TEMPERED TO THE SHORN LAMB," otherwise the delicate organization of woman could never bear up under the severe trials which it is her lot to endure. As a means of sustaining her strength, and bringing her safely through the difficulties and dangers of which she is by nature the heiress, no medicine ever prescribed is comparable to DR. WALKER'S VEGETABLE VINOPAIN BOTTLE. In all derangements of the female system it restores regularity, and promotes physical vigor and mental repose.

For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, depression of spirits, and general debility in their various forms;
as a preventive against fever and ague, and other intermittent fevers, the "Ferro-Phosphated Elixir of Cali-casi," made by Cassell, Hazard & Co.,
New York, and sold by all druggists,
is the best tonic and as a tonic for patients recovering from fever or other sickness, it has no equal.
We should not hesitate to recommend to any friend of ours, Parson's Purifying Pills; they are scientifically prepared, and are adapted to all the purposes of a good pur-gative medicine.
Decidedly the best remedy that has ever been discovered for rheumatism, swollen joints, neuralgia, sciatica, bruises, cuts,
and burns, is Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.
We use it and always recommend it to our friends.
The American people, in adopting any great reform, are all much like the Yankee who let with a Dutchman that he could swallow him. The Dutchman lay down on a table, and the Yankee, taking his thumb in his mouth, nipped
it severely. "Oh, you are biting me!"
roared the Dutchman. "Why, you fool!" replied the Yankee. "Did you suppose I was going to swallow you whole?"

Allen's Lung Balm
Is warranted to break up the most troublesome Cough in an incredibly short time. There is no remedy that can show more evidence of real merit than this Balm, for curing Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Whooping Cough, etc., etc.
It Acts on the Lungs,
It Acts on the Liver,
It Wholesomes it more than a Cough Remedy.
Read the following from a reliable druggist of Official County Paper.

CHASKA, THURSDAY, APRIL 19th 1871.

The State Bonds.

The Minneapolis Tribune, which gave a lukewarm support to the bond bill, is moved by its defeat to say: "No State 'growing' or 'expecting' to grow—wanting, or expecting to want, capital—or desiring to preserve a reputation for common honesty—can afford to let its creditors, and like a dishonest coward, take refuge behind its sovereignty, and thus escape the fulfillment of its constitutional obligations—and to do so on such trifling and really contemptible grounds as were urged against the late bond bill, is a disgrace as well as a crime. It does not require a far-sighted man to discover that the true interests of the State do not lie in the direction of such a policy, nor to realize the fact that sooner or later this conclusion will be brought home to the people of this State through their public and private interests, in an unmistakable and emphatic manner—when those of their advisers who are really opposed to any liquidation of this debt, but ashamed to own it, and hence resort to all sorts of quibbles to defeat any and every plan for placing the character and credit of the State beyond future reproach, will find their true level and meet with their just reward."

Postponement of Soldiers Reunion.

At a meeting in January last of the committee appointed by the several regimental associations, to confer and take action in regard to a general reunion some time in 1871, of all the Minnesota army soldiers and individual soldiers it was resolved to petition the Legislature for an adequate appropriation to cover the expenses of such a reunion, to take place on the 20th of June—the anniversary of the day of battle from the State of the 1st Regiment.

The Legislature was duly petitioned, and the committee had interviews with the military committee of the two Houses but no favorable action was taken.

The consideration that the State has been so much as to warrant a liberal appropriation this year, and that it would be better to postpone action until another year, and then make more adequate and suitable provision seem to prevail in the minds of the legislative committee.

In view of this failure to get an appropriation the regimental committees recommend that the proposed general reunion be postponed at least until next year.

WM. R. MARSHALL.

Chairman of committee.

We regret to learn of the death of Col. Henry C. Rogers, which occurred at Browardale on Monday morning last. His death was not unexpected, having been ill for the past two years. The immediate cause of his death was acute bronchitis.

The Ku-Klux Bill.

"I desire to state that I agree with those who see in several provisions of this bill an encroachment of the national authority upon the legitimate sphere of local self-government, not warranted by the constitution of this republic,"—Carl Schurz at St. Louis.

Minnesota News.

The Minneapolis Tribune says that at the meeting of the Trustees of Northfield College, held at Northfield Tuesday, the reception of fifty thousand dollars in cash as a gift for the general endowment fund, was announced. The donor is William Carleton, Esq., of Charleston, Mass.

A boy named Oscar Peterson was drowned at Minneapolis, Thursday. The boy had left for school in the morning below the sluices the river. While mowing about among the logs he slipped in and was carried away by the current, and his body has not yet been recovered.

Hon. O. Denmore, of Red Wing, has been appointed clerk in the office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Mr. Lewis Pearson [colored] and Mr. Willard Grindall [white] will hold a debate on the question, "Which is the most important thing, Money or Religion?" at the colored Methodist Church, St. Anthony, on Monday evening next.

Two St. Paul Irishmen observed last Sunday by having a prize fight for the affections of a certain lady on whom they were both sweet, the vanquished to relinquish all claims. Six rounds were fought and the "other fellow" came out ahead, and doubtless enjoyed the fruits of victory.—Lake City Leader.

The official vote on the bond question in Stearns county is as follows: No. 904; yes, 106.

The "St. Paul Irishmen" did no such thing. The story as detailed is wholly sensational, without a grain of truth.

The hens are laying monstrous eggs on the table of the Winona Republican. The last is 64 by 84 inches. "Don't suck it!"

A few years ago, a mortgage was given on a piece of land in this county for the sum of $200. On Saturday last the mortgage was foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises, when it was found that the interest, taxes and cost, added to the original amount of the mortgage, reached the sum of about $900.—Albert Lea Standard.

In speaking of the emigrant wagons passing through Albert Lea, the Standard remarks: "It is singular how long some people are in learning the fact that no emigrant contains all the good and desirable things of this life; and as a natural result they are continually on the move; live poor, fare hard and die penniless."

Capt. A. L. Brown's house, in the town of Sumter, in McLeod county, was destroyed by fire on Monday, the 5th inst.

Baptismal Services.—On last Sunday afternoon eight persons were baptised in the Mississippi, by the Rev. Van Horn of Battle Creek, Mich. who has been preaching regularly in Swartz's Hall for the past two weeks. Mr. Van Horn's "points" are the keeping of the seventh day and a belief in a second advent.—St. Cloud Journal.

Secretary Seward III in India.

Calcutta March 29. Correspondence of the London Times.

Mr. Seward, on his way over the country, was taken ill at Allahabad, and was unable to dine at the United Service Club as he had agreed to do. I believe the illness was not very serious, but the hot weather set in, and a man of Mr. Seward's years, and from a climate so different, would be as well off of India. I refer to the subject more particularly to quote a passage from the honorable gentleman's letter to the Club. After a very handsome acknowledgment of the invitation of the Club, &c., Mr. Seward said: "The efficiency of the Government service in India, in all its departments, commands my highest admiration, and induces on my part fervent wishes for the welfare, prosperity and happiness of all those who are engaged in it." I am quite sure that this is no more than the due of Indian administration, but it ought to be of value to the view of one who knows something of what Government is, both in peace and war.

Vandalism.

It appears by a statement in the last number of the Bulletin monumental that the new Prefect of the Landes, in France, has consented to the demolition of a large portion of the magnificent Roman walls enclosing the town of Dax, which for years have been watched over by the French Archaeological Society and by some of the most eminent men in France and England. To a representation made from the latter country, the Emperor paid such prompt attention that the walls were commanded to be left untouched. But the present Mayor, in order, as is asserted, more effectively to exercise electoral influence favorable to the Government, has induced the new Prefect to consent to this unjustifiable course.

A Prison Romance.

The Michigan State prison develops a bit of romance in the case of a lady from Wisconsin, wife of one of the convicts, and described as young and graceful, who has come to reside near the prison while her husband served out the remaining two years of his term.—According to the prisoner's story, he was in some way engaged in a hand swindle in Wisconsin, and to escape prosecution there came to this State and pleaded guilty of stealing a watch from his grandfather, for the purpose of getting into prison while his friends settled up the swindle, which having been accomplished, his fond wife patiently awaits his release, while he promises better things for the future.

Wm. M. Campbell, of Litchfield, Sheriff of Meeker county, offers a reward of $100, for George W. Donahue, accused of the murder of James Flynn. Donahue is about 28 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in height, weighs about 165 pounds, light complexion, light hair, heavy mustache, sandy whiskers. He wore at the time of his escape, a dark colored coat, light shirt, over coat; he is rather dirty in appearance, and is supposed to be without money.

On the evening of the 11th, Francis Lord and Thomas H. Vandy, citizens of Buena Vista, Hamilton county, Indiana had an altercation about some matrimonial troubles, the former charging the latter with insulting his wife. Friday morning Vandy concealed himself in a lumber yard, and as Lord passed by Vandy sprang upon him with a butcher knife, and stabbed him to the heart, killing him almost instantly. Vandy was committed to jail in Noblesville.

Strayed from the premises of the subscriber in the town of Waconia, on April 25th one mare colt two years old, of light bay color. It was last seen on the road to the village of Waconia. $5 reward will be given to the person giving information where the mare can be found.

MRS. E. CALE.

Waconia April 27th 1871.

Notice.

Our advertisers will hear with us for this issue. We have a large assortment of job and advertising type on the way from Chicago, and will try and have them in place next week.

Buildings &c.

Indications are that a large number of buildings will be erected in Chaska during the summer and fall, in fact a number are already under way.

Wm. Brinkhouse has already completed the foundation for a large two story building on second street near the late Herald office. It will be frame 22 x 140, and intended for a hotel.

Mr. Jorgensen of Shakopee, has lumber on the ground for a one story building, in which he will hold forth as Jeweler & Silversmith.

Mr. John Kerker is also breaking ground for a large two story building adjoining his present place of business.

Several small dwellings have already been erected in the out-skirts of the village.

Hastings & D. R. R.

Grading is progressing rapidly on the 20 miles under charge of Messrs. Langdon and Linton contractors. Sub-contractors are at work on this side of the river and perfected part of the road bed can be seen at all points between Carver and the river. Mr. Day the sub-contractor at this place is actively at work and his job has already assumed proportions of no ordinary character. We are informed by Mr. Rogers the Engineer in chief of the road, that Mr. Langdon has also the contract to build and complete the bridge at this point and that the architecture will be of a superior order. It is expected that the "Iron Horse" will be running into Chaska by the 1st of November next. The road will be completed to some point near Glenview next year.

Large Shipments.—Henry Young and Linenfeiser & Faber, made the largest shipment of Hoop-poles last week of the season. They shipped to Stillwater per the barge "Little Mac" 110,000 poles. The poles were mostly of the largest kind, intended mostly for casks and pork barrels. A large amount has also been shipped per rail via Merriam Station.

Good Prospects.—Business in Chaska begins to look up. The prospect of soon being in rail communication with the outside world has had a most marked influence upon the future prospects of Chaska. Confidence has been restored and our Merchants and leading citizens are making preparations to keep pace with the order of events. All that Chaska needs is a little more capital to develop her resources, and we expect that with the advent of the two roads into our village next fall, the deficiency will be supplied.

Flood.—The Steam Mill has been running nearly all the time since starting up last winter and has turned out on an average over 100 barrels of flour per day, and of the very best quality.—Mr. Toucey the business manager and Miller, is considered as at the head of his profession in the State.

Real Estate Sales.—Real Estate transfers are common occurrences in our village, especially in town lots. The following are a few that have come under our notice lately.

F. E. Du Toit brick building, known as the Herald office to John Schaffer of Carver, consideration $1,000.

Warner & James, two building lots to Peter Weego, consideration $275.

A May-Day Jolly, Some Time After

By BETSY BROWN.

You must wake and call me early—call me early, do you hear? To-morrow will be the busiest day of any in the year. Of all the days in the year, Bridget, the noisiest, the first of May. For oh! we move to-morrow, Bridget—to-morrow the first of May.

There'll be lots of broken furniture, but none, I hope, of mine. Smashed crockery, looking-glasses, and many a lot of wine. Wash-stands, bureaus, tables, will go in that same way. For oh! we move to-morrow, Bridget—to-morrow the first of May.

I sleep so sound all night, Bridget, that I shall never wake.

If you don't call me loud when the day begins to break.

For I must break the china and glass in pieces of May.

For oh! we move to-morrow, Bridget—to-morrow the first of May.

Plane, books, and pictures will go in the first cart.

And oh! if they should scratch them, I'm sure 'twould break my heart.

Then bedding, and baby's cradle, will quit full of May.

When we move to-morrow, Bridget—to-morrow the first of May.

As I came up the doorway, when I think you did I see, that that good-looking woman, quite fresh-looking as a rose.

The man who moved us last year, breaking everything that day.

But he isn't more to-morrow, Bridget—to-morrow the first of May.

Oh! well, do I remember how each article came to grief.

From a marble bust of Psyche, to a turn of cold corn beef.

For I have another such trial, my heart it will turn grey.

When we move to-morrow, Bridget—to-morrow the first of May.

If it rains to-morrow, Bridget, whatever shall we do? For I would spoil the parlor furniture, carpets, and mattress now.

I'm beginning to suspect it's a business that don't pay.

Moving about each year, Bridget, upon the first of May.

TWICE MISTAKEN.

FROM A BACHELOR'S DIARY.

Six o'clock. Crumms and I solemnly put on the wine and glasses, push the dessert dishes a little one way or the other, and leave the room.

"Bravo!" whispered Crumms, when we are in the hall. "Bravo, sir! With a little teaching, you'd make a capital waiter. And Miss Linton mistaking you for a gentleman, too. What a joke! At least," he added, as if he suddenly feels that he has made rather a mistake himself, "of course that is what you are; and a gentleman is always a gentleman; but you understand, sir, it was so ludicrous."

"Perfectly. I understand, Crumms. What are you going to do now?"

"Well, sir," he says, coming a little nearer, "I generally have something in the housekeeper's room. Maybe you wouldn't like that, though we should be quite alone."

"As I want something to eat, and am not particular where I get it, I follow Crumms down stairs into the kitchen. The servants are busy washing up the plates and dishes, amid a general smell of dinner and hot water, which is far from pleasant. The housekeeper takes us once into her room, where there is a cloth spread upon the table, and a row of the good things from upstairs on a kind of dresser."

"You are sure you don't mind, sir," says Crumms to me when we were alone, "because I'll wait till you are done, if you like. I am not hungry."

"But I am, and I shall not begin till you do," I answer, and we sit down together. The soup is cold, and fast becoming stinky; the fish looks mangled and unsavory; so I decline soup and fish. I find that the having a little something in the kitchen after the dinner is over up stairs requires training that is necessary. For a man who professes not to be hungry, and who has had a good dinner a few hours before, he displays a capability for eating truly wonderful. I prefer to eat in the kitchen, have not been touched up stairs; he, on the contrary, is on equally good terms with all of them. However, I get quite enough to satisfy me, and there is a novelty in eating one's Christmas dinner with a lady in a back kitchen. The wine certainly is the best part. Crumms has taken care that there shall be plenty of champagne, and a most liberal host with Mr. Domville's port and sherry.

Seven o'clock. Crumms says he must take the coffee up to the gentlemen, and leaves the room. No sooner is he gone than one of the servants comes in, apparently in search of something. Whatever it is, she does not find it. She hunts about eagerly for a minute, and then stops opposite me.

"So Miss Linton took you for a gentleman," she says with a laugh. "How nice!"

"Miss Linton made an unfortunate mistake," I answered gravely, imitating Crumms' manner.

"Well, I don't know about that," she replies. "There is certainly an excuse for her doing so."

"This strikes me as being very open flattery; but, under the circumstances, it loses its point; moreover, the speaker is rather warm from standing over her tub of hot water, and very plain into the bargain. As I don't answer, she tries another subject."

"You are out of a situation at present, ain't you?"

"I am."

"Where were you?" she asks.

"In the country."

"Not," she says, knowing Crumms came from that part. "And so now you've come to London?"

At this moment, Crumms shut the dining-room door, and the girl, who had been looking further for whatever it was she had pretended to come in to fetch, immediately makes a rapid retreat.

"Been pumping with his thumb in the direction of the kitchen."

"Trying to," I answer.

"I knew they would," he replied. "They are awful curious about you, them women. I wouldn't stop here too long now. There ain't anything more for you to do, and I can say you've got an appointment to keep, you know."

Acting upon his advice, we go up stairs to the hall, and Crumms let me out, shutting the door very quietly behind me.

It is a fine, clear night, and I turn my face homeward and stroll slowly along the long, straight Gower street without meeting any one. By the University I see a figure advancing quickly. We pass under a gas lamp, and both pull up.

"Herbert, by Jove!"

"Why, Roche, what are you doing here? Going out to dinner?"

"Just had it, he replied; been to see an old lady house."

He then naturally wonders what I am doing, strolling along the streets on Christmas night. I tell him I have been out to dinner.

"They have broken up early," he says; and then asks suddenly, "You haven't sneaked off to read, surely?"

This is said in a tone as if it were a mortal sin for a man to read for an examination on a Christmas day.

"That's right," he says, when I have disclaimed any idea of reading. "Well, # you come home with me. My people will be very glad to see you. We always have a carpet-dance or something in the evening."

I accept readily, and go back with Roche to his house.

Nine o'clock. We have cleaned the room for dancing, and the first quadrille has just commenced. Not being able to get a partner, I am standing on the landing, when a carriage rolls up to the street door, and there is a loud knock announcing the arrival of the new-comers.

Mrs. Roche hurries down and meets them in the hall. I hear her say as they come up stairs, "You're just too late for the first dance, Helen."

The name quite makes me start. "By Jove, if it should be Miss Linton, my interest is excited. I half hope it may be, and I half hope it may not be, and I haven't time to decide which is the stronger before Miss Linton herself comes laughing up the stairs."

At the very first glimpse of her I instinctively draw back into the shade, and she and her mamma pass by without noticing me.

It seems very ridiculous to meet the same young lady twice in one evening, first as a waiter, and then as a guest; but there it is done; it is a fait accompli, and Miss Linton and I are once more under the same roof. I wonder if she will recognize me, and I watch her with interest as she goes round the room. Sooner or later we must meet, and the awkward moment comes sooner than I expect.

When Miss Linton reaches the door where Roche is standing with his partner, she stops there and talks to them when they are not dancing.

"Is there any lemonade, Edward?" she asked, presently. "I want some, if there is."

"That's a bad sign, Nelly, after dining out," he answers in a laugh. "There is some down stairs. I would get you a glass, but you see it is in the housekeeper's room. Maybe you will find somebody outside, I think."

Roche leads off with the third figure; Miss Linton comes out again upon the landing, and I move from the shadow of the wall into the light.

She gives a quick start when her head and opens her eyes in surprise as she sees me. There is just a little tightening of her lips, a faint blush rises to her cheeks, and then she asks me quietly to fetch her a glass of lemonade.

Roche said it was down stairs, and I would find it in the dining-room. I am rather glad of the excuse to get away and have my laugh out, for the whole thing is more and more absurd, since Miss Linton has made a second mistake, and thinks I am a waiter. It is a very natural error, of course; and to keep up the deception, I put the glass on a tray and go gravely to the kitchen.

She is quite composed now, and thanks me unconcernedly as I hand her the lemonade. Then we stand side by side, I holding the tray in both hands—till the dance finishes, and Roche comes out to us.

"Have you got your lemonade?" he asks. "That's right. Now you want a partner for the next dance. Who shall it be? I am engaged till after supper, unfortunately. Oh, here! Let me introduce you. Miss Linton, this is my friend, Mr. Roche."

Instead of waiting to hear my name, the young lady puts down the glass quickly and looks indignant.

"What is the matter, Edward?" she says, as she walks off. "Some mistake, old fellow," whispers Roche to me, and catches her up just inside the room.

"They're so close I can hear what they say."

"What is the matter, Nelly?" he asks.

"How could you be so ridiculous as to introduce me to him?" she replied. "Why shouldn't I?"

"Why shouldn't you? He is a waiter, I know that. He was waiting at Mr. Domville's."

Instead of looking contrite, Roche goes off into a roar of laughter.

"It was very stupid of you," she says, half crossly. "It forced me to be rude to him."

"What nonsense, Nelly! I shouldn't play you such a trick as that, of course. That is Herbert; he is in the same of me as I am."

"You are not joking, Edward, are you?" she asks him quite seriously.

"No; upon my word I am not."

"To say I am so sorry that we are standing on the landing again, I have never told me what you took me for. An ogre?"

"What then?"

Her laughing eyes looked up with their old merry sparkle into my face. They seem at the time to question me whether I shall be annoyed if she speaks the truth. She pauses for a moment, and then says, "A waiter," and presses her lips tightly together.

"But it was quite excusable," she begins hurriedly.

"Thank you again," I remarked, interrupting her.

"You won't listen," she says plainly to me.

"That I look so much like a waiter, I add, breaking in again, "that it was quite excusable taking for one."

"O, no; I don't mean that, of course," she says, forced to laugh. "But where I was dining there was a waiter, and he looked exactly like you," she emphasizes the word "exactly," and glances quickly up at me as she does so. "And I mistook him for a gentleman, and thought he was one of the guests."

"So you make up for it by taking me for a waiter," I answer. "Well, I think the waiter had the best of it."

"But it was excusable, was it not?" she asks; "you two being so much alike."

You mistaking the waiter for a gentleman, if he was like me, certainly."

"No," with a little stamp of her foot; "my mistaking you for a waiter."

"I can't grant that," I answer.

"Very well," says she, with a laugh, "then she mistook me for a waiter, and she, as her partner comes for the next dance, 'I think my first mistake was the more excusable of the two.'"

"And I think the last by far the worse," I replied.

"Do you? Well, I am very sorry,"

she answers; but her eyes belie her as she goes off laughing into the drawing-room.

Fortunately, I secure the dance before supper and take her down.

"You don't wait so well as your double," she says, as I hand her some champagne. "I had just put them before her for a minute, and then taken them away."

"I am sorry for that," I answer, "but then, you see, I know you never eat mince pies."

"How do you know that?" she asks, turning round quickly.

"Your cousin has told me a great deal about you," I reply.

"Did he tell you, pray, that I never eat mince pies?"

"How should I know if he did not?" I say, with assumed simplicity.

She looks very incredulous. "He didn't tell you that, I know; though I believe you men talk a great deal of nonsense; as much nonsense as women do."

"You own that about women, then, and yet you want them to have seats in Parliament?"

"No, now I am certain you must have been at Mr. Domville's," she cries, "for I never said so till to-day at dinner, and then only in opposition to my neighbor. If you don't mind, you will have known what I said."

"Do you believe in the theory, Miss Linton, I began with a grave face, 'of a person knowing by a sort of affinity the thoughts and actions of another person, whom he has never seen, but whom, when he is permitted to see, he is at once, by fate, most deeply interested in?'"

"No, I don't," she replies, laughing. "How nonsensical you are!"

"Before I am going on expounding my imprudent theory, Roche comes up and says, 'I don't know what you are talking about, but the property has been destroyed by a power against which vainly may issue its threats in vain. Plainly enough while the river holds its course, the property is safe; but the limitation to its destructiveness. It is generally conceded that the direction of the current cannot be changed, or its force restrained, and the only way to protect the property is by direct limitation to its destructiveness. Several miles above the city, where the current turns westward, it should be directed into its old channel within the confines of Tennessee. But who shall essay the task? ## The Valley Herald

Official County Paper.

CHASKA, THURSDAY, MAY 25th 1871.

PARIS CAPTURED.

The telegraph brings us the intelligence that the Government troops have captured and occupied Paris after a terrible hand to hand battle. We hope this puts an end to civil conflict in poor unhappy France.

Short Trips to Europe.

Mr. Wm. C. Prime is the author of a most pertinent article in June Harper, showing in detail how short trips to Europe may be made. To sum up, he says: One may go from New York to Berlin and see the triumphal capital of the German Empire and the grand fireworks of Kautsch, and be at his work in New York again in thirty days. One may leave this city on the first of the month, lie dreaming in his gondola for three or four golden evenings and moonlight nights in Venice and reach New York again before the month is ended. Take these two skeleton facts, and in their dry bones build up as many days of easy travel as you can give yourself and family this summer.

Opposition to the Treaty of Washington.

The Legislature of New Brunswick has adopted by a unanimous vote in both branches, resolutions condemning the terms of the treaty of Washington, inasmuch as they affect the interests of Canada. After the passage of the above the Legislature was prorogued. The following is the paragraph in the Lieut. Governor's speech relating to the treaty: "The result of the deliberations of the Joint High Commission at Washington, so far as our Dominion provincial interests are involved, is calculated to excite alarm and dissatisfaction; but we do not for a moment suppose that the Dominion Parliament will give its assent to those parts of the treaty which deprive of our invaluable fishery rights for the vast waters of an equivalent, when we should have in return therefor at least free admission to the United States markets for our ships, coal and lumber."

Lumber Items.

The following items in reference to the "river drivers," &c., on the St. Croix and tributaries, we find in the last Park County Press: Snake river logs have been running thick all the week. The Naumaggon logs are all out into the St. Croix, and it is thought with the help of dams, nearly, if not all of this drive will be got in. The Apple River drive is well on its way, and will no doubt be in the St. Croix in a short time, being much earlier than is usual for that stream. Log rafts, belonging to W. H. C. Folsom of Taylor's Falls, have been passing down the river for several days past, on their way to Stillwater. A large number of logs are scattered over the "bottoms," between the Falls and Stillwater. Many thousands of feet will lay there during the summer, or until another flood enables the "drivers" to gather them in.

A Boston Anecdote

We clip the following from Harper's Drawer for June: Even the Boston gentlemen of color participate with the white savans of the Hub in their lofty disdain of the talent of New York. A friend, happening to be caught in that city over Sunday, thought he would take a glimpse at some of the churches. Stepping inside the porch of an Al meeting house the sexton, colored, approached respectfully, and said: "Will you have a seat, sah? Plenty seats this morning, sah." "No, thank you; can't stay but a moment; just stopped to glance at the church. What is the name of the clergyman?" "That, sah, is the Rev. Dr. ———— "Fine preacher, isn't he?" "Well, sah, peoples has different notions 'bout preachers." "But he seems quite animated?" "Yes, sah; consid'ble animated." "And appears to have talent?" "Well, sah, as I said afore, peoples has such different notions 'bout preachers. Dar's some dat tinks he's mighty good on de words. I tink myself he's a fair man, sah—a fair man, but not of de prime fust class. He's a good man, sah, a well meanin' man, but not a talented man. He's a New York man, sah?"

HENDRICKS AND THURMAN.

Probable Presidential Candidates.

The Washington correspondent (a Republican) of the Cincinnati Commercial, (not Don Platt) speaks of Chase, Hancock, Hoffman, Gen. Sherman, Hendricks, and Thurman as probable Democratic candidates for the Presidency. Either Hendricks or Thurman, he thinks will be the nominee. Of these he gives the pea portraits which follow:

HENDRICKS. Looking over the entire ground ran the Democrats find a better man than ex-Senator Hendricks, of Indiana? I might mention Pendleton, but he is out of the way absolutely. Hendricks, in Congress, showed more fitness for leadership than any man they have had there for years and years. He was not an explosive man in Congress, as many of their leaders have been, but he was not persussive and convincing. He had a fashion of presenting anything in such a clear fair light, and of excusing, defending and glossing over the errors of his party, that you could scarcely listen to him without being convinced, knowing all the time that he was merely "blowing," as the engine boys say. He has never done anything without deliberation, and without any positive knowledge on the subject. I suppose his past is without a blemish. He has taken pains to make himself popular, and he has succeeded. Whoever has seen Hendricks likes him. I was with him when he made his trip to the Pacific coast, and I know with what enthusiasm he was received by the people along the way. If he spoke, the people praised the sweetness of his voice, and the gentleness of his manners. Yet he spoke the truth about his opponents, and made strong and vigorous arguments in favor of his own party. Colfax on the Pacific slope at the same time, and the supporters must have thought that Indiana presented the sweetest and best men in the world. (Credulous sycophants, you do not know them all.)

THURMAN. There is one man even better than Hendricks, and he is the only Democrat in the party (I had better say, Hendricks) that is fit to be President. He is a different man from Hendricks. While he has the vanity that belongs to every honest man, he nevertheless despises the clap-net and humbug by which it is so often gratified by the politician. He does nothing for policy; and there is a man in the world he abhors, condemns and pities the little arts which men employ to get a little fame or notoriety, it is Thurman. He is not a pretender in any sense. He does not speak unless he has something to say and never has anything to say unless there is some chance of exciting misapprehensions, affording information, exposing false reasoning or exposing dishonesty or trickery. He does not care whether there is one man in the Senate gallery or one thousand—he speaks for the Senate. He does not mince matters when he is defending any measure or exposing errors. He does not study how best he may say a thing to make an offense. He speaks out boldly, calls things by their right names, and does not boggle and lament the necessity of using strong terms. He will do nothing he deems to be wrong for friend or party; and although a strong and trustworthly partisan, he is yet too noble to oppose a just proposition because it comes from an opposition. There is something of the old Roman in Thurman's character, which commands universal respect, and his ability stands out like a burning light against the sky. As a debater he has no equal in the Senate, certainly not on the Democratic side; and as a reasoner he is just, logical and correct. As a lawyer he is precise, judicious, critical, not exciting, yet broad and liberal when it is safe to be so. As a constitutional lawyer he is without a peer. He was the only man to take Hendricks' place, but he is able, clearer, more courageous, less sensitive, and more effective. The party would be weak, indeed, in the Senate, at this time without him. He is regarded by the republicans as the floor as the ablest Democrat in the country; and the opinion may not be worth much, but it is freely given, that the Democrats can better afford to lose the field with such a leader than hazard the present and endanger the future by looking for a man who knows nothing, represents nothing, and amounts to nothing. Just because he has done so little in the great battle of life that he has made no enemies and no mistakes.

YOUNG AMERICA.—We are requested by the Rev. Mr. C. H. Savage, to announce that Religious services will be held in the Grove near Young America on Sunday the 28th, inst, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m., and also in the afternoon—all are invited to attend.

SHADE TREES.—A very large number of shade trees were planted this spring, and thanks to the very favorable season, they are all growing nicely and will in a few years give the village a magnificent appearance. A large number of fruit trees were also put out and will bear their reward in years to come.

CONGRATULATIONS.—Our young friend Ernst Hamlin of Watertown, passed a most creditable examination and was admitted to the "bar," using a legal phrase, during the present session of the District Court. His many friends in the County will be pleased to learn of his admission and future success.

PERSONAL.—Julius Hammer, of St. Louis, is in town on a visit to relatives. We acknowledge a pleasant call. Mr. Hammer is one of the largest manufacturers and dealers of Tobaccos in St. Louis.

ESTR. Thomas of Young America made our village a business call last week and we had the pleasure of a social chat. Geo. Bleicher of Benton passed through on his way to St. Paul on Tuesday. Jacob Merwinson of Benton, made us a pleasant call on Monday. Mr. M. is the owner of one of the best blacksmith shops in the county and does as good work and as cheap as any firm in the county. Those wishing work in his line should give him a call.

SODA WATER.—Mr. E. O. Leary, the veteran pop-manufacturer of Minnesota, made us a very agreeable call last Saturday. Mr. Leary's Pop ranks as the best in the State. Mr. Peter H. is agent for this village and orders left with him will receive prompt attention and will also be delivered free of charge. Give him your orders.

NICE PREMIUM.—S. S. Wood & Co., of Newburgh, N. Y., publishers of the Household Magazine are furnishing a nice premium this year, in the form of a pocket magnifier. The magnifier (price $1.50) and the magazine will be mailed to any address for $1.50. Magazine two years in advance with magnifier, for $2.

CHOIR.—We are informed by our farmers that crops of all kinds are looking well and promise a very fair yield. The late rain did an immense amount of good.

Report of Grand Jury.

To the Honorable A. G. Chardfield Judge of the District Court in and for the County of Carver, Minn. 8th Judicial District.
General May term A. D. 1871.
The report of the Grand jury in and for said County respectfully shows that the common jail of said county, and find that the cells occupy one half of the basement of the Court house building, and that the other half of the basement is in an unfinished state, and has apparently never been cleaned out since its erection. That in consequence thereof there is a very offensive odor issuing therefrom, which must be injurious to the health of the inmates of the jail. Therefore they, the grand jury would respectfully recommend that the Board of County Commissioners take such steps as are necessary to have said apartment cleaned out, and thoroughly cleaned. And the report of the grand jury aforesaid further shows that they have appointed a committee, consisting of three of their members to examine the official bonds of the several county officers, who reported that the bonds of the Judge of Probate and Sheriff of said county were insufficient. Wherefore the attention of the Board of County Commissioners is called to the fact, and they the said Board of County Commissioners are hereby requested to cause said bonds to be made good and sufficient.

And the report of the grand jury further shows, that nearly all of the justices of the peace of said County have heretofore failed to transmit to the clerk of the District Court of said county the certificates of the convictions had before them, and their fines collected by them, as required by law, and the grand jury aforesaid recommend that the Co. Attorney take proper steps to compel the justices of the peace of the county to comply with the law in the aforesaid respect.

And the report of the grand jury further shows that there are a large number of persons engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors in said county Carver, and that none of said persons have obtained license therefore according to the laws of this state. And they, the grand jury aforesaid do recommend that the Board of County Commissioners of said county take the proper steps to compel all persons who are engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors within said county to comply with the laws of the State of Minnesota, relating to the sale of such liquors.

CHASKA, THURSDAY, MAY 26th 1871.

PARIS CAPTURED.

The telegraph brings us the intelligence that the Government troops have captured and occupied Paris after a terrible hand to hand battle. We hope this puts an end to civil conflict in poor unhappy France.

Short Trips to Europe.

Mr. Wm. C. Prime is the author of a most pertinent article in June Harper, showing in detail how short trips to Europe may be made. To sum up, he says:

One may go from New York to Berlin and see the triumphal capital of the German Empire and the grand freewheel of Kautbach, and be at his work in New York again in thirty days. One may leave this city on the first of the month, lie dreaming in the gondola for three or four golden evenings and moonlight nights in Venice and reach New York again before the month is ended. Take these two skeleton facts, and in their dry bones build up as many days of rosy travel as you can give yourself and family this summer.

Opposition to the Treaty of Washington.

The Legislature of New Brunswick has adopted by a unanimous vote in both branches, resolutions condemning the terms of the treaty of Washington, inasmuch as they affect the interests of Canada. After the passage of the above the Legislature was prorogued. The following is the paragraph in the Lieutenant Governor's speech relating to the treaty: "The result of the deliberations of the Joint High Commission at Washington, so far as our Dominion provincial interests are involved, is calculated to excite alarm and dissatisfaction; but we are not for a moment to suppose that the Dominion Parliament will give its consent to the treaty which deprives of our invaluable fishery rights for the voiceless mockery of an equivalent, when we should have in return therefore at least free admission to the United States markets for our ships, coal and lumber."

Lumber Items.

The following items in reference to the "log driver," &c., on the St. Croix and tributaries, we find in the last Polk County Press:

Snake river logs have been running thick all the week.

The Namackagon logs are all out into the St. Croix, and it is thought with the help of dams, nearly, if not all of this drive will be got in.

The Apple River drive is well on its way, and will no doubt be into the St. Croix in a short time, being much earlier than is usual for that stream.

Log rafts, belonging to W. H. C. Folsom of Taylor's Falls, have been passing down the river for several days past, on their way to Stillwater.

A large number of logs are scattered over the "bottoms" between the Falls and Stillwater. Many thousand feet will lay there during the summer, or until another flood enables the "drivers" to gather them in.

A Boston Anecdote

We clip the following from Harper's Drawer for June:

Even the Boston gentlemen of color participate with the white savans of the Hub in their lofty disdain of the talent of New York. A friend, happening to be thought in that city over Sunday, thought he would take a glimpse at some of the churches. Stepping inside the porch of an Almoning house, the sexton, colored, approached respectfully, and said: "Will you have a seat, sah? Plenty seats this morning, sah."

"No, thank you; can't stay but a moment; just stopped to glance at the church. What is the name of the clergyman?"

"That, sah, is the Rev. Dr. —"

"Well, preacher, isn't he?"

"Well, sah, people has different notions 'bout preachers."

"But he seems quite animated."

"Yes, sah; couldn't be aimated."

"And appears to have talent!"

"Well, sah, as I said afo, people has such different notions 'bout preachers. Dar's some dat tinks he's mighty good on de words. I tink myself he's a fair man, sah—a fair man, but not of de prima facie class. He's a good man, sah, a well meanin' man, but not a talented man. He's a New York man, sah."

The ladies of Duluth are preparing a beautiful silk flag for presentation to Sherbrook Post, G. A. R. of that city.

HENDRICKS AND THURMAN.

Probable Presidential Candidates.

The Washington correspondent (A. Republican) of the Cincinnati Commercial, (not Don Platt) speaks of Chas. Hancock, Hoffman, Gen. Sherman, Hendricks, and Thurman as probable Democratic candidates for the Presidency. Either Hendricks or Thurman, he thinks will be the nominee. Of these he gives the portraits which follow:

HENDRICKS.

Looking over the entire ground can the Democrats find a better man than ex-Senator Hendricks, of Indiana? I might mention Pendleton, but he is out of the way absolutely. Hendricks, in Congress, showed more fitness for leadership than any man they have had there for years and years. He was not an explosive man in Congress, as many of their leaders have been, but he was not perceptive and convincing. He had a fashion of presenting anything in such a clear light, and of excusing, defending and glossing over the errors of his party, that you could scarcely listen to him without being convinced, knowing all the time that he was merely "blowing," as the engine boys say. He has never done anything without deliberation, and without any positive knowledge on the subject, I suppose his speech is without a blemish. He has taken pains to make himself popular, and he has succeeded. Whoever has seen good him made his trip to the Pacific coast, and I know with what enthusiasm he was received by the people along the way. If he spoke, the people praised the sweetness of his voice, and the gentleness of his manners. Yet he spoke the truth about his opponents, and made strong and vigorous arguments in favor of his own party. Colfax on the Pacific slope at the same time, and the people must have thought that Indiana presented the sweetest and best man in the world. Cautious slyness, you do not know them.

THURMAN.

There is one man even better than Hendricks. I have kept his name till the last as a sort of desert to this dreary and ill-considered feast. His comes in just where the champagne and speculation do, a big dinner—when everybody is in good humor. His name is at the top of this paragraph, and he is the only Democrat in the party (I had better except Hendricks) that is fit to be President. While he has the vanity that belongs to every honest man, he nevertheless despises the clasp and hum, and he is so often gratified in the politician. He does nothing for policy; and if there is a man in the world he abhors, condemns and pities, it is a little arts which men employ to get a little fame or notoriety, it is Thurman. He is not a pretender in any sense. He does not speak unless he has something to say, and never has anything to say unless there is some chance of correcting misapprehensions, affording information, exposing false reasoning, or exposing dishonesty or trickery. He does not care whether there is one man in the Senate gallery or one thousand—he speaks for the Senate. He does not mind matters when he is defending any measure or exposing errors. He does not study how best he may say a thing to prevent offense. He speaks out boldly, calls things by their right names, and does not huddle and lament the necessity of using strong terms. He will do nothing he deems to be wrong for friend or party; and although a strong and tenacious partisan, he is yet too noble to oppose a just proposition because it comes from an opponent. There is something of the old Roman in Thurman's character, which commands universal respect, and his ability stands out like a burning light against the sky. As a debater he was unequal in the Senate, certainly not on the Democratic side; and as a reasoner he is just, logical and correct. As a lawyer he is precise, judicious, critical and exacting, yet broad and liberal when it is safe to be so. As a constitutional lawyer he is without a peer. He was the only man to take Hendricks' place, but he is a clearer, more courageous, less sensitive, and more effective. The party would be weak, indeed, in the Senate, at this time without him. He is regarded by the republicans on the floor as the ablest Democrat in the country; and the opinion may not be worth much, but it is freely given, that the Democrats can better afford to lose the field with such a leader than hazard the present and endanger the future by looking for a man who knows nothing, represents nothing, and amounts to nothing, just because he has done so little in the great battle of life that he has made no enemies and no mistakes.

In conformity with the third section of the act of Congress, approved March 3d, 1851, vol. Thomas G. Pitcher, late infantry, in the recommendation of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home, detailed as governor of that institution, to relieve Col. A. T. Lee, retired, to take effect September 1, 1871, and by direction of the President, Col. Pitcher is assigned to duty from that date, according to the commission of Brigadier General by brevet.

My John.
I stand behind his elbow chair,
My soft hand rests upon his hair—
Hear where silence is deeper to me
Than all the gold of earth could be;
And my eyes of love
Look tenderly down,
On John, my John.

The bright haze, and laughter and warm—
Wraps me both in its kindly arms—
John, as he sits in the bath-glow red,
Me with my hand on his dear old head—
Enveloping us both,
Like a ring of love,
Me and my John.

His form has lost its early grace,
His hair no longer is smooth and fair,
For time has left its autograph there;
But a noble price,
In my loving eyes,
Is John, my John.

"My love," he says, and lifts his hands,
Browned by the suns of labor, to me,
In tender glow on mine to lay,
How long ago was it, John, my John,
I smile through my tears
And say, "Years and years,
My John, dear John."

We say no more, the freight grows:
Both of us, on the earth, we know?
My hands drop down in a mute career—
Each third of my heart, a wish to bless
With my wife's best worth
The heart and the heart
Of John, my John.

IN SHELTON COAL MINE.
"You'll be certain and not dis-appoint me, Willie?" I exclaimed.

"Disappoint me?" I exclaimed: "why, Katie dear, whatever put the notion into your head that I should do that? When did I ever disappoint my darling?"

"Never," but then once must be the first time, you know," and Katie nestled her soft cheek close to mine, and drew a little sigh.

I took her into my arms—and, indeed, I had been holding her to my side for some time, for we were trying to say good night, and in those days it always took a long time to bring it about.

We were acknowledged lovers nearly a year, and managed to make ourselves about as silly as the average lovers.

Dear little Katie! This plainly I can seem to see her even now, looking back over the years which have fled since then.

The beautiful rose face, the red-lipped lips, the blue eyes lifted to mine from out the tangles, and curls, and circles of those brown hair, which she had tumbled all over her face as it lay against my bosom.

I kissed her rapturously, and she lifted up her head and pushed back the soft hair.

"You'll be very sure to come Wednesday night by six?" said the same small autocrat, resuming a tone of command, "we are going to have chicken trussed and cranberry sauce. And if it takes a minute over after it is ready it is spoilt."

No, William, you'll be punctual?"

She always called me William when she wished to be particularly impressive.

"Why, of course I will be punctual, dear. I am surprised at you for doubting me. What makes you, Katie?"

"You will laugh at me, Willie, if I tell you, and I don't like you when you laugh at me. It makes me feel about as large as a butterfly's eye. I had a dream last night."

"Have you been reading Shakespeare?"

"You were not to laugh at me. That is, you must not if you wish me to tell you. I thought that I asked you to come to me Wednesday night, and that you promised just as fairly as ever you could, but you did not come, and you never came any more. And I dreamed that I was a gray-haired old woman, and still I sat all day by the window watching for you—expecting you always."

Katie's voice was very solemn, and there was a vague look of pain on her face which I hesitated to kiss away.

"Nonsense, child," said I: "didn't you know that dreams always tell you by contraries? Of course I shall come, and stay so long that I shall make you glad twice, little dreamer."

"No, indeed! If you only would, though, I think I should rather like it."

"My precious little Katie! But I must go, or I shall never be up by bell-time in the morning. Good-night, dearest."

And after a long while I managed to tear myself away from her.

I was very happy as I trudged home that night beneath the gray November sky.

I remember that I whistled and sang snatches of songs in a low voice, and thought of Katie all the way.

We were to be married at Christmas, for I had been elevated to the position of chief engineer to the Bridgeport Glen Coal Works, and my salary was fifteen hundred dollars a year.

We could well afford to marry, though for that matter we should have married, I suppose, if I had had but five hundred.

For we loved and trusted each other perfectly, and when there is love enough a dollar can be made to go a great way.

I could not help feeling just the least bit in the world tried with Kate for thinking I would disappoint her. Never in the whole course of our acquaintance had I done so, and I would soon have committed murder as given her cause to feel sad a moment.

A woman's happiness is made up of little things, and there is no pang for her than to feel that the man to whom she has given the noblest and purest affection of her heart is neglectful of her wishes.

Girls, take the advice of an old fogey, and keep clear of the man to whom she makes appointments and fails to keep them.

Wednesday night came, dark, and with strong promises of storm. I went home early, and dressed to go over to Mr. Erie's.

"Where are you going this dark night, William?" asked my mother when I came down stairs.

OUR DISPUTES WITH ENGLAND.

Synopsis of the Treaty Arranged by the Joint High Commission.

The treaty is to be known as the Treaty of Washington for the adjustment of claims for injury alleged by the United States on account of the escape of Confederate cruisers from British ports and depredations committed by those vessels during the late rebellion in this country. A tribunal of arbitration is constituted, to consist of five arbitrators—one appointed by the United States, one by Great Britain, one by the King of Italy, one by the President of the Swiss Confederation and one by the Emperor of Brazil.

The treaty establishes special rules of neutral duty and obligation in addition to the generally received public law, which rules, although not admitted by the belligerent governments, have been in force at all times here. This tribunal may either award damages in detail or in gross, at its discretion, and may refer this case to a board of assessors sitting in the United States. It also shall report from time to time, with the payment to be made to the United States, the British Government may express its regret for the occurrence of the incidents complained of by the United States.

For the adjudication of all other claims of the United States against Great Britain, one of Great Britain against the United States, during the time period—that is, from the 18th of April, 1861, to the 31st of April, 1865—an arbitrator, named Commissioner, is provided, to sit at Washington, with an umpire to be named, if necessary, by a designee friendly power.

At last I grew very weak and tired. All desire to eat left me. The thought of the most tempting viands sickened me. I could not have dined with any degree of pleasure even at a king's table.

The memory of the blue sky and the warm sunning, the voices of birds and living friends woke in me no longing. All I wanted was to rest. I wished that I had a soft bed to lie on—my bones seemed to be so old.

From that I fell to wondering if I were not very old, and if this weary feeling were not old age.

Then there was a long blank, and from it I awoke with a transitory strength which vented itself in wild hallooos and cries for help—the very first I had uttered since being in this horrible place.

The sound of my own voice was frightful to me. It seemed to come from an immense distance, and it echoed and reechoed from corner to corner with appalling distinctness.

Was it a fancy, or did I really hear my faintly answered cry? Again I shouted, and this time I was sure a human voice replied.

I rushed toward the sound, and looking upward, saw a grey glow instead of the everlasting blackness.

It convinced me that I was near an opening. I tried to bound on toward it—I tried to scream louder, but voice and strength alike failed, and I fell prostrate to the earth.

When I came to myself I was lying on the grass with my head on Katie's bosom, and her soft hands were resting back the wet hair from my temples, hot tears falling fast upon my face the while.

"Are the chicken and cranberry sauce cold, dear?" I asked in a wondering sort of way, and from that day forth, for days and days, I was oblivious of every thing.

Afterward, when I was myself, I heard a voice very angry—she confessed it to me with her own sweet face hidden on my shoulder, and her dear little hand on my forehead.

Katie had been very angry—she confessed it to me with her own sweet face hidden on my shoulder, and her dear little hand on my forehead.

Search had been made everywhere, but no one thought of the old mine.

Two days and nights passed, and they were about giving up the quest in despair.

Suddenly, Katie said, like a gleam of light came to her the thought of the old mine.

She had hard work to persuade any one to join her—so much were the people in awe of her, and from that day forth, for days and days, I was oblivious of every thing.

Afterward, when I was myself, I heard a voice very angry—she confessed it to me with her own sweet face hidden on my shoulder, and her dear little hand on my forehead.

The Collapse of the Grandeur of Paris.

Edward Dicey writes in Appleton's Journal:

Of all the changes in the aspect of Paris which most strike the eye, none has not seen the city since the days of the Empire, the greatest is one which is easier to appreciate on the spot than to describe at a distance. I know not how better to express it than by saying that the life has somehow gone out of Paris. It is not only that the streets are half empty, that carriages have well-nigh disappeared, that the shop windows are bare of wares, that trade is obviously at a stand-still, that house after house is shut up, that there is no building going on, that beggars are to be met with everywhere; there is besides this an unavoidable impression of a great, settled gloom about the city, that Paris has outlived its prime. Much of this impression may be owing to the circumstances of the moment, but still even when order is restored, and the settled gloom about the city, that Paris has outlived its prime. Much of this impression may be owing to the circumstances of the moment, but still even when order is restored, and the settled gloom about the city, that Paris has outlived its prime.
